

September 16 1915

I just woke and it is 6:30 in the morning, and I noticed that today in the trench the sloppy water has risen about an inch. Since just last night! Soon we are going to need to dig a new trench because ours is almost flooded. Also there are these giant rats that are starting to creep me out, with their giant front teeth. Yesterday a dozen German's came rushing for us in the middle of the night. But luckily we had our night watcher looking for Germans. So he yelled as loud as he possible could. We all woke up and started shooting at the Germans. But today it was pretty quiet. There have not been many gun shots or Germans rushing us so far today.

So today we finally had to dig a new trench. 3 people died in the progress of digging it. I luckily did not have to dig because I was on night watch duty. The Germans haven't shot or rushed in a long while. Our General said "No rushing it might be a trap." I hope something happens because right now it is really boring. They might be all dead or they might have run for the hills. If you get this I am still alive for now.      By: Carter
